

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a device for performing login processes by storing authentication information for a plurality of users, information indicating whether or not a login history is left, is set for each user and login histories are held according to the set information.

5 User identification information is displayed on the basis of these held login histories and any piece of the user identification information is selected at a login operation so that the user identification

10 information is entered at the login operation.